About the Speaker Dr. Ross Greene is the originator of the Collaborative Problem Solving (CPS) approach described in his books The Explosive Child, Lost at School, and Treating Explosive Kids. He is Associate Clinical Professor in the Department of Psychiatry at Harvard Medical School, staff psychologist at the Cambridge Health Alliance, senior lecturer in the school psychology program in the Department of Education at Tufts University, and adjunct Associate Professor in the Department of Psychology at Virginia Tech. Dr. Greene is also founder of the non-profit organization Lives in the Balance, which aims to advocate on behalf of kids with social, emotional, and behavioral challenges and provide support and resources for their caregivers. He consults extensively to families, general and special education schools, inpatient and residential facilities and systems of juvenile detention. For additional resources on the CPS model visit www.livesinthebalance.org.

"Why is Collaborative Problem Solving important? Because challenging kids are still very poorly understood and therefore treated in ways that are unhelpful and counterproductive...and that places them at risk for adverse long-term outcomes...and it doesn't have to be that way." ■ Lives in the Balance
